Introduction

Our team supports the practice of protecting human participants in research. This form provides you with important information about taking part in this study, entitled Measuring Self-Described Identity. Your participation in this study is entirely voluntary, and you have the right to withdraw at any time without penalty or negative consequences.

Summary

The purpose of this study is to measure how people self-describe their race, gender, and other identity categories. In this study, we will ask you to think about differences between standardized categories and how you describe your identity.

This study will take approximately 10 minutes to complete.

Taking part in this study is a great opportunity to share your unique perspective on identity.

Procedures

During this project, the following will happen: You will be asked to describe your identity according to a few key dimensions, then will be asked to complete a demographic survey. The survey helps us to ensure that we collect data from people with different backgrounds.

Risks

The risks and discomfort associated with participation in this study are no greater than those ordinarily encountered in daily life, such as when surfing the internet.

Data collection and confidentiality

During this study, we will collect certain data from you, including your demographic information (e.g., your age, race, gender, and sex) and how you describe your identity. This data will be used to conduct academic research on how people describe their identities. As part of this research, we may make survey responses and demographic information available to other researchers so they can build on our work, so please do not provide information that you are not comfortable sharing with other researchers. If you choose to withdraw, any data collected from you will be deleted and not included in the final analysis. Please note that responses are logged even if you do not click submit at the end. To ensure data is properly deleted, please contact Professor Emma Pierson at emmapierson@berkeley.edu.

Your personal information will be kept strictly confidential, and all data will be stored securely.
